Farewell to Chief Sub Jon Squire after seven years

CAMEOS GALORE!

or all the amazing trailers and adverts to run during Super Bowl XLIX, the most attentiongrabbing of all was one that didn't even air! The incredibly naughty (not safe for TV) Carl's Jr burger clip was banned at the last moment, not for the "all natural" burger, but rather the au naturel 21-year-old busty blonde strutting her stuff across the screen.

Her name (because we know you're all wondering) is Charlotte McKinney, and yes, the ample-chested hottie does bear a striking resemblance to fellow Yank, Kate Upton - who, not coincidentally, had her Carl's Jr burger ad pulled from the 2012 Super Bowl.

The comparison to her cracking compatriot isn't lost on Charlotte, either: "It's pretty obvious. We both have blonde hair, we're from Florida, and we have enormous boobs! It's super-flattering, but I'm ready to get that tossed away and start making a name for myself."

Believe us, Charlotte, we're pretty sure yours is one name destined to be on every ZOO reader's lips for some time...

DO'S NEW 3DS TEST

We get hands-en-wine-hone-versions of Vinnagues flew after indirect or gunder being being anyone

The new 3DS comes in two forms and while both feature the same improved CPU, each has a unique feature to tempt you. On the one hand, the 3DS XL's screen is 90 per cent larger than that of the original. On the other, the normal 3DS allows you to customise your case with "Kisekae" faceplates (right) and buttons that replicate the colour scheme of the iconic SNES controller.

HEAD TRACKING 3D TECH!

For a handheld console that has long prided itself on the strength of its 3D technology, the shaky viewing angles have always plagued the system. In the past this meant that even the slightest of tilts to the screen would ruin the 3D illusion and cause many a game to blur beyond belief. But not any more, because now the front-facing camera will auto-detect where your head is and adjust accordingly (right), no matter what crazy five-degree angle you're viewing it from.

BETTER CONTROLS!

Apart from the fact that Nintendo's Circle Pad Pro accessory released in 2012 looked utterly hideous, it did serve one purpose, in signalling the glaring flaw of the original 3DS handheld - namely the lack of a second analogue stick and two extra trigger buttons. Thankfully, the new 3DS corrects this from the get go with two new triggers on the back and a "C-Stick" nub, which should rule out having to purchase any more cumbersome attachments in the future.

THE BEST 3DS GAMES

This remastered version of the Nintendo 64 classic may look graphically superior and have a couple of neat new tricks up its sleeve, but most importantly the game is as fun and entertaining as it was on its initial release 15 years ago.

Another release to mark the unveiling of the new 3DS and 3DS XL, and what better than an addition to one of the most addictive games series ever made. That said, be prepared to sink several hours into this engrossing fantasy RPG.

Could Mario Kart 7 really be the best racing game of all time? We'll go out on a limb and answer with a resounding "yes", which is why you'll definitely want to leave yourself enough money to drop it into your shopping basket when you purchase your brand new 3DS or 3DS XL.

Never let it be said that Nintendo doesn't have a shedload of absorbing platform games. But in a sea of very solid Mario titles, surprisingly it's a game featuring the other Italian plumber that we'd recommend you buy first.

All the fun of the Wii-U's Super Smash Bros, only now in your pocket. But believe us, while your screen size might have diminished, the thrills and spills of smashing Mario round the chops with a baseball bat certainly won't have.

This game was a whopping 21 years in the making and when it finally dropped on the 3DS back in 2012 it was an instant hit. Three years later, it's still one of the best-looking and strongest action games available on the console.

Nintendo doesn't really do sports games. Well, it does, but they're invariably pretty awful. Unless, that is, you're playing Mario Golf, which is consistently one of the easiest and most enjoyable pick-upand-play games around.

It's arguably the best Resident Evil game released in the last five years. In fact it was so popular that Capcom even ported it to PS4 & XBOX - and there aren't many DS games which can boast such an achievement.

The newest Nintendo handheld might boast a bigger screen, interchangeable faceplates and a much faster CPU, but it's the addressing of several very big issues which dogged the original 3DS that makes this (still) the undisputed number one handheld gaming console. To use a Nintendo Pokemon analogy: it's as if the original DS has finally evolved to achieve its perfect final form. A beast that's bigger, bolder and better than its previous self in every single way.

UPFRONT The maddest thing we've seen this week! CLOUD NCHES! BBC Weather said nothing about it being cloudy with a chance of cock and balls The filming of Doctor Who was the last big thing to happen in the small town of Port Talbot. At least it was until the sudden appearance of a huge cockshaped cloud floating over the Welsh town recently. Sadly the gigantic phallus wasn't made by the Almighty, but rather an unexpected discharge (don't laugh!) from the local steelworks. It emerged the filthy formation was likely a reaction from the rapid cooling of iron. Which is a better explanation than our guess that someone was burning some wood. ON SALE TUESDAY 17 FEBRUARY

Put your knees up, Harry

Harry Redknapp's resignation from QPR came as a shock. The fact he didn't make any deals on Deadline Day was surprise enough! But if he can't walk, as he says, it's time to call it a day. It's not like being a boxing trainer, where you can get away with sitting in the corner screaming advice; you need to be able to get up and down the pitch.

No sex before fight night

It's ZOO's Sex Issue and people always ask about sex before a fight. It's not so much no sex, it's no ejaculation. There's a big difference. You can have sex as much as you want, but it's in the release where the damage is done. You lose all those minerals and nutrients that have built up from all the good nutrition. The Japanese call it chi. When you ejaculate, that just diminishes your chi and it can take weeks to build it back up. A lion is most dangerous when it's hungry and horny, and that's how you want to come into a fight.

weighs 2.3 tonnes and accelerates from 0-62mph in 4.2 seconds? The BMW X6 M.

We'll admit that is an awful set-up, but the performance figures for BMW's latest SUV monster are no laughing matter.

The stonking 4.4-litre twin-turbo V8 engine produces a massive 750Nm of torque, meaning the huge "soft-roader" can accelerate like a bullet from a gun.

But this isn't a drag racer in disguise: despite having the body shape of a darts player, it can handle itself on the twisting surface of the infamous Circuit of the Americas track, as our exclusive first drive demonstrated.

We were handed the keys and told to follow none other than ex-F1 ace Timo Glock in a pace car around what is one of America's toughest race circuits.

The German didn't hang around and we soon had the tyres screeching and the goliath squirming under the heavy braking. But it did a fantastic job of disguising the fact that it's really just a lavish SUV underneath the race-ready additions.

It costs a wallet-busting £93,070, features more leather inside than a DFS showroom and offers almost zero visibility through the rear window. It's not the most practical nor the prettiest, but once you feel the performance of the V8, all will be forgiven.

Due to be unveiled at the Geneva Motor Show in March, this scorching diesel estate looks set to become the car of choice for anyone needing to transport a load of goods at speed. It features the same 181bhp engine as the GTD hatchback, meaning it can smash the 0-62mph sprint in 7.9 seconds. It looks great, too.

Plug yourself into this week's hottest entertainment, featuring the best films, games, music and DVDs

Here's the problem: zombie games have been done to death, and established titles have cornered the market. Resident Evil is the go-to puzzle game, Call of Duty occasionally does it with loads of guns, Left 4 Dead takes the tactical co-op route and Dead Rising is daft button-bashing fun.

So where does Dying Light, the second game from the team behind the unexceptional Dead Island, fit? Amazingly, the answer is in a world of its own.

It's the shuffling zombie experience that many hoped Dead Island would be. A semi-serious adventure that excels in combat and story and also features an exceptional free-running/parkour element to the open-world madness. Maybe there is life left in the undead market after all? ****

With exaggerated bloodshed, eye-rolling "thrills" and tired "it's behind you" plotlines, the horror genre can be its own worst enemy. But sometimes, you get smacked around the face by sheer, chilling brilliance. Enter The Babadook.

Single parent Amelia (Essie Davis) is at a loss. She struggles to discipline her out-of-control son, whose dreams are plagued by a sinister monster. Stereotypes there may be, but you won't be expecting to be this freaked out. ****

The four pizza-eating heroes (Leonardo, Donatello, Michelangelo, Raphael) and a rat named Splinter take on a supervillain and his soldiers in this revamp of the kids' classic. The turtles, assisted by Megan Fox's gorgeous news reporter, must stop bad guy Shredder's plan to poison New York with toxic gas. Ridiculously scatterbrained in parts, the laugh-out-loud moments from jokester Michelangelo make this Michael Bay update worth a watch. ★★★☆☆

John May (Eddie Marsan) is an oddball who lives alone and works for the council, organising and attending the funerals of fellow loners. Or rather he does, until the council gives him the elbow. Not content to sit around twiddling his thumbs, he takes it upon himself to locate the families of the dead and persuade them to turn up at their relatives' wakes to pay their last respects.

But when May discovers his final "client", a middle-aged recluse called Billy, had friends and family, none of whom wants to say a final goodbye, he digs about and unearths more than just skeletons in his closet.

The bleak look (literally everything is grey) makes for a stylishly downbeat film, but if you're not a fan of the arty stuff, you may want to steer clear.

The The

Charli XCX Sucker

When it comes to the glitzy heights of 2015 British pop, you'd be hard pressed to find anyone more dominant right now than Cambridge-born babe Charli. Well-known, if wildly annoying, tracks such as Boom Clap aside, fun '80s-tinged tunes such as Famous make for an exhilarating game changer, oozing award potential. ★★★★☆

Grim Fandango

LucasArts first released caper - about Manny, a travel agent in the land of the dead - back in 1998 to universal acclaim. Seventeen years later and the graphics might have had a slight makeover, but the core game remains untouched, principally because it's still one of the most original and enjoyable adventure games ever devised. ★★★☆

Enemy

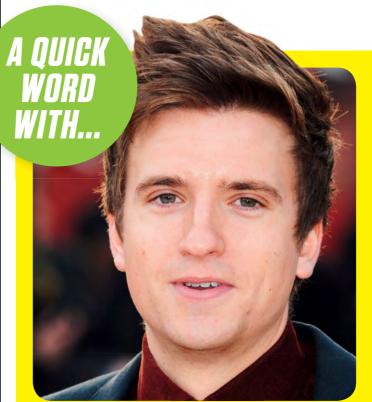

Adam (Jake Gyllenhaal) is unnerved to learn he has a doppelganger, Anthony (also Gyllenhaal). What who lead very different lives: one is a professor with a girl on call, the other a married aspiring actor. This mind-grabber requires patience and a second viewing - even if just for the handful of sex scenes. ★★★★☆

Gutshot

Serial gambler Jack (George Eads) finds himself in trouble when murderous underground scene from which he just can't fold. If you're looking for high-octane action, you're better off with Dan Blizerian than this Steven Seagal vehicle. Clunky and dated, nothing and no one here comes up trumps. *****

GREG JAMES

HEY GREG! WHAT GOT YOU EXCITED ABOUT SIGNING UP TO I SURVIVED A ZOMBIE APOCALYPSE, THE NEW BBC THREE REALITY SHOW?

If I'm being honest, when the show's producers first told me about the whole concept, I wasn't the biggest fan. It sounded as though they wanted me to present a sh*t version of The Crystal Maze! But when I actually sat down with the production team and director and had everything explained to me, I came round to the idea very quickly.

THE HUMOUR IS VERY SHAUN OF THE DEAD, RIGHT?

Yeah, completely – that's what I loved about it! It's set in a creepy, disused shopping centre that looks completely spooky. In real life, it looks sh*t - how they managed to make it look even sh*tter is beyond me. Essentially, it's zombies in stupid make-up doing funny things and that's all the rage right now. DEFINITELY, WHAT WITH THE

WALKING DEAD FRANCHISE...

Yeah, bloody hell! That was a shocking pun, apologies, but I think shows like that offer a fun sense of escapism and silliness that people can really get into. I think that's why people love The Hobbit, too. It's a weird distraction from the boring nine-to-five.

THE SHOW BRINGS TOGETHER PEOPLE WHO ARE INDIVIDUALLY TRYING TO GET THROUGH THE ZOMBIE APOCALYPSE: DO YOU RECKON YOU'D SURVIVE ONE?

That question is quickly becoming my favourite pub-talk topic. Everyone has theories about why they'd boss it over someone else. I'd be equally as crap as all my mates. We'd p*ss about eating the rations and stall when it comes to killing the baddies, I think. Saying that, I've had some survival training -I was once sent up in a helicopter in Afghanistan to transmit a radio show over a warzone. Maybe I'm doing myself a disservice here, I reckon I could ace it! COULD THIS SHOW WORK IN

A CELEBRITY FORMAT?

Oh yeah, definitely. Celebrities are always looking for new ways to embarrass themselves. Can I just insist that Perez Hilton is put in there?

Cake. CAKE?

No, steak! And I'd be baking in my stockings and suspenders. Sound good?

WHEN BLOKES TRY AND PULL YOU, WHAT MISTAKES DO THEY MAKE?

I don't like it when guys touch me. I find that really rude. If they touch your hair or grab your bum - that's the worst. →

"IDO LIKE THE FACTI GET MY OWN WAY"

INSIDE THE SECRET SEX PARTY SOCIET "It's like Victoria's ots of sex,

He used to run the track, now he's playing the field. Meet the man behind the hottest sex parties in the country urely this is every man's dream gig: hand-selecting beautiful women to attend your upmarket sex parties. No strings, few rules and even fewer clothes. Heaven's Circle is Chris Reynolds Gordon's party project. Here he tells ZOO exclusively about the best party you've (probably) never been to...

Chris' Story

"Aged 17, I was the fastest 800m runner in Europe and one of the best in the world. I then had loads of drama at home and, although I reconciled with my parents, my mum died six months later. With some inheritance, I spent my twenties investing in the stock market and property, but lost it all in the recession. I lost £3.2m in total. Suddenly, I was homeless, living on a changing room floor and in hostels. I'd hang around Tesco, waiting for the meals to be reduced to clear. Then I stayed with my gran in Wales, packing boxes for Amazon. I then came up with an idea for sex parties. It started small then went massive."

"I used to go to so-called 'elite parties' - sort of upmarket sex events - with an ex-girlfriend. I enjoyed them, but I looked around at the older, overweight people there, and thought, 'I can do better than this.'

"We started small, got a crowd of good-looking people involved, then it got bigger. The first threesome I had was with a female yoga instructor while I was with another girl. We'd had this threesome and she was getting changed as she had a yoga class. Me and this girl were having sex while talking to her. It was amazing.

"We only host our parties in beautiful, multimillion-pound houses. A few celebrities started coming and there was an article in a national magazine. Now it's booming."

THE PARTIES

"We have different kinds of parties. We have a traditional sex party, which is couples and single girls. We don't have single blokes at those as they tend to lurk and it can be quite awkward. Our crowd are all normal people doctors, nurses, teachers. Never weirdos.

"Secondly, there's the single-guy-friendly parties for which we pick the hottest girls vs. the hottest single guys. And there are always more guys than girls for those."

THE SEX

"It's a blast. Someone left one of our gatherings and said, 'It was like going to the Victoria's Secret after-party - only everyone was going wild and having sex.'

"People dress up like they're going to a top club in London. Later on, they get changed into sexy lingerie, maybe people dance, which leads to playing or watching. Then sex. Sex everywhere. It's very relaxed.

"You're in a stunning location, so people don't care whether they fk in front of people, and then that snowballs. I don't care about the naked blokes, as I'm looking at amazing naked women.

"It becomes normal. your sense of reality is out of whack. You'll be going home, buying petrol, and thinking an hour earlier I could've gone up to a girl and said, 'Hi, do you want to go and fk?""

THE SECRET SOCIETY

"Couples fly in from Paris, New York, Germany, all over. Heaven's Circle brings all these kinky people together.

"The girls are smoking: fitness models. You might see your pin-up model from ZOO! Guys have a strange mentality where they think the hotter the girl, the less she'll be into sex because she's untouchable. I know girls who are average, who say, 'No sex on the first date.' And I know covergirls who absolutely love sex any time, anywhere."

THE RULES

"Honestly, it's not for everyone. If your relationship isn't stable it can break it. It should be seen as the sugar on the top, not the whole thing – and if you live off sugar it doesn't work! Remember, if you cheat in a relationship, it's never the same again.

"You never know what your girlfriend likes until you ask. There are couples for whom cheating is having sex with someone else without their partner watching. If you want that kind of relationship you need give and take, but most of all, you need honesty. It's about rules."

"It's all about spontaneity and surprises – don't get me roses, I hate them! I'm really into food – and sex, obviously! Sex is so important when it comes to Valentine's Day and you Valentine's Day, and you have to pull out the stops and actively make more of an effort. Sexy lingerie is an absolute must."

MICHELLE HEATON The Big Reunion

"It might seem far-fetched, but I want to be whisked away to a remote island (preferably in the Caribbean) where it's just us two. I know that's asking a lot but imagine how romantic it'd be! I'd ban presents, though: let's be honest, a trip away is enough!"

SANDERSON

Hollyoaks "You lads are in luck because I don't have a date at the moment, but I'm on the look-out! I'm the dream Valentine's date because I'm so laid back. I'd be happy to sit on the couch with a bottle of wine, a great film, both of us in our PJs! Flowers go down well with me: nice ones mind you, not from the garage."

"I just want a dream man for Valentine's Day! I want to find myself a gentleman, but a gentleman doesn't have to live life by clichés! Flowers and chocolates are such boring gift ideas."

WHAT'S OUR THREE-POINT GUIDE TO BUYING UNDERWEAR?

L Look at the styles she already wears and don't deviate too much. Finally, if you want to buy naughty underwear go for expensive naughty underwear. It still looks classy that way.

WHERE SHOULD WE GO FOR UNDERWEAR INSPIRATION?

A ZOO magazine!
L I watch a Victoria's Secret fashion show every morning
- I'm not sure whether
I fancy them or just want to be them! I love Candice.
I can't take my eyes off her.
WHAT ABOUT FANCY
UNDERWEAR?
SHOULD US FELLAS
TAKE A RISK AND BUY

SOME?
A I love the set I have on right now, the strappy bra.
Extra detail is very sexy, though it can make it harder to take off.
L It does come with risks attached! My ex was nearly in tears once because he didn't realise my bra opened at the front and couldn't get it off! Best form of torture ever.

WHAT SHOULD WE AVOID WHEN BUYING GIRLS UNDERWEAR?

A A friend's fella bought her a crotchless, fishnet, all-in-one pink thing. That was a bit much.

L Nothing really shiny or tacky.

WHAT ABOUT REALLY NAUGHTY UNDERWEAR?

L I quite like peephole or crotchless! As long as it is high-end – I don't want any cheap and nasty stuff. A I have a black Kelly Brook, allin-one corset that's very sexy. It is backless but gives you good boob shape. I wear it with stockings for extra effect.

THE BEST, BIGGEST AND FUNNIEST STORIES FROM THE WORLD OF SPORT!

FA CUP FIFTH ROUND SPECIAL! "Forget Harvard, I learn from Diego Costa!"

Middlesbrough's on-loan Chelsea striker Patrick Bamford talks smart footballers, goading Vincent Kompany and pulling off another cup shock at the Emirates

ATRICK, HOW MUCH ARE YOU LOOKING FORWARD TO FACING ARSENAL AFTER YOUR WIN AT MAN CITY?

We've been focused on the league, so we've been trying not to think about it, but we'll go there with confidence. They've hit form and have all their best players available, which makes it even more exciting. It's more incentive to beat them!

YOUR STRIKE PARTNER LEE TOMLIN TWEETED THAT VINCENT KOMPANY FELL OUT OF HIS POCKET WHEN HE DID HIS WASHING, DID THE REST OF THE DEFENCE FALL OUT OF YOURS?

Ha ha. I can't believe Lee put that up on Twitter; all the lads gave him stick about it. But it was a good team effort so I don't think you can pick out any individual performances. A LOT HAS BEEN MADE ABOUT THE BON JOVI CONCERT YOU WENT TO AT THE ETIHAD STADIUM BEFORE THAT GAME.

HAVE YOU BEEN TO ANY CONCERTS AT THE EMIRATES?

The last time I was at the Emirates was to see Chelsea play Arsenal in the Capital One Cup and we won two-nil so hopefully that's a good omen. IS IT TRUE YOU'RE FLUENT IN GERMAN AND FRENCH, AND WILL YOU BE USING THAT TO WIND UP PER MERTESACKER AND LAURENT KOSCIELNY?

My French is good enough to get by living in France and I can pick out the odd few words in German. But in terms of winding up defenders, that's not my style. I'll give as good as I get if they niggle at me but I prefer having a laugh to all the real argy bargy. DO YOU EVER REGRET TURNING DOWN A PLACE AT HARVARD?

I applied to a few universities in America just in case things didn't work out in football and I got offered a place at Harvard to study business. It was always a back-up option, but since I've started football professionally I've never looked back.

YOU AND FRANK LAMPARD ARE WIDELY REGARDED AS TWO OF THE SMARTEST FOOTBALLERS? DID YOU EVER DISCUSS QUANTUM COSMOLOGY AT CHELSEA?

We never really had those conversations, believe it or not. One player who is seriously clever at Chelsea, though, is Petr Cech - he even looks clever. Footballers often get labelled as not being too smart, but a lot of players nowadays speak two or three different languages, which is no mean feat.

HOW DISHEARTENING WAS IT SEEING THE LIKES OF DIEGO COSTA, LOIC REMY AND DIDIER DROGBA GETTING BROUGHT IN AT CHELSEA WHEN YOU WERE STILL TRYING TO BREAK INTO THE SIDE? In my mind I'm still

Jockey Brendan Powell Jr on riding ZOO mare Rhythm Star home in third for her best race to date

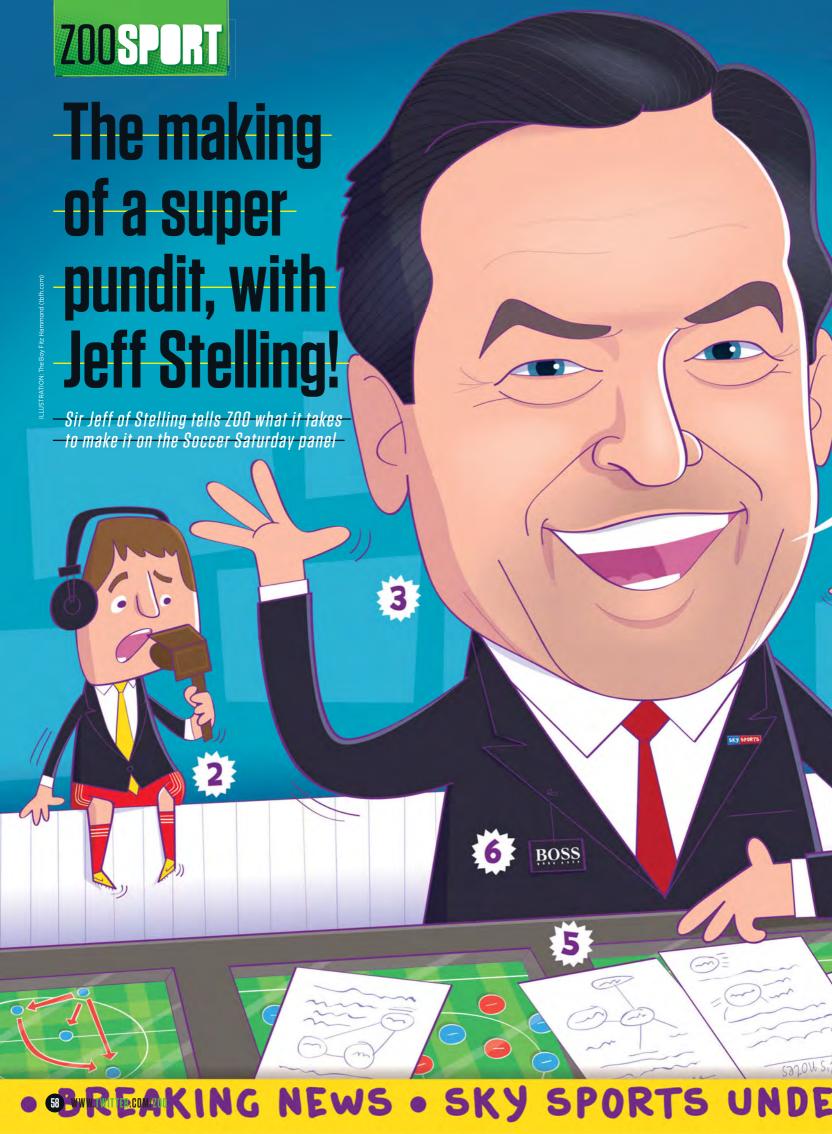

"Rhythm Star ran really well to finish third at Wincanton. The ground was very soft and the conditions were so awful it was more like motocross! When you've got a genuine, hard-working horse like Rhythm Star, it makes your life a lot easier, so full credit to her.

"She ran her best race to date to come in third, carrying more weight than the winner and the second place. She also finished in front of the horse that beat her at Fontwell, so she completely turned the form around with that one!"

1. Lots of stats

"It goes without saying that you've got to know the game. I immerse myself in football during the week, from every newspaper to every website -I make notes on absolutely everything. You've got to accept that you won't use 99 per cent of your research, but that one occasion you can draw on it makes it worthwhile."

2. No fences

"There's no point in sitting on the fence. Some of the best footballers in the game for the past 20 years didn't make it as pundits because they were too afraid to express an opinion that might offend one of the guys they used to play with. People want to hear your opinion as a pundit, so you shouldn't be afraid to give it, especially if it is different."

3. Fast talk

"You've got to finish talking about your views of a specific incident before the game moves on so you have to be concise. You might only have five seconds to articulate your thought processes and express them, that's how hard it is. Sometimes on Soccer Saturday we get people who are fantastic talkers off-screen that struggle to describe what they have just seen."

4. Corny one-liners

"Look for that bit of background information that nobody else is really aware of or a different angle to give a piece a bit of life. A lot of the papers ran the story about Middlesbrough striker Patrick Bamford having been at the Etihad Stadium for a Bon Jovi concert ahead of their FA Cup fourth-round clash with Manchester City. So I used the line 'now it's Man City who are living on a prayer' after he scored. It was corny but it worked!"

5. Good notes

"You never know when your mind is going to go blank, so you need good notes. I write down the most basic things like manager, position in the table and so forth. You've soaked in all the stats and facts over the week and then you squeeze them out, so the notes are a good safety net. I couldn't tell you a single stat by 6pm on a Saturday!"

6. Smart suit

"If you're going to sit in the pundits' chair then you have to be suited and booted. Jimmy Bullard is a friend of the show, but I didn't enjoy watching him appearing on the BBC last month and turning up in some outlandish outfit.'

7. Real fans

"My favourite piece of punditry was Paul Merson's 'there's love bites and everything!' for Man City players celebrating Sergio Aquero's title-winning goal against QPR a couple of seasons ago. We were all out of our seats in the studio like any other fan at home and Merse was able to capture the moment because he's just a fan himself."
